The Alton City Fathers have twice made an official donation to the St. Louis firemen. Father and son, principals in the controversy for possession of the latter.

Fred M. Axetell of No. 4157 Easton avenue, who was arrested for abducting his own son, says he did not know he was violating the law when he took the boy from the Irving School, Twenty-fifth street and Bremen avenue.

Axetell spent nearly all of Wednesday in the Tenth District police station, and in the evening was transferred to the Four Courts, a warrant having been issued against him at the request of his sister-in-law, Mrs. Fred Mantz of No. 2218 Salisbury street, who claims she is the boy's legal guardian.

The police recovered the boy Tuesday night after an exciting experience with the father, who attempted to retain custody of the child.

Mrs. Mantz stated that she would not have applied for a warrant against her brotherin-law had it not been that she feared bodily harm at his hands.

"He has threatened me several times. I am afraid of him," said Mrs. Mantz. "The boy, whose name is Fred, was legally adopted by me shortly after the death of Mr. Axetell interfered. Then the other policeman took a hand in the affair, and they succeeded in getting him away."

The father of the boy, when seen in the police station, was much downcast over his arrest. He said he had been advised by a friend that he could take the boy without taken care of him ever since, clothing him and sending him to school. The boy is happy and contented, and never expressed a desire to return to his father.

"Last Sunday after noon Mr. Axetell passed by my home and saw Fred playing on the sidewalk. He called the boy to him and started to walk away with him, when I saw the bour and started to walk away with him, when I saw the latter of the boy trade, and lives with him and started to walk away with him, when I saw the bour and the latter.
